

ABSTRACT

A film-shaped preparation disintegratable in aqueous media, for administration of substances to the human or animal body and containing at least one water-soluble polymer is characterized in that said preparation contains one or more components that produce a gas upon action of moisture or in the presence of an aqueous medium or in the case of a change in temperature.